Tracy Casady bio

Tracy Casady is currently a Human Resource Manager for a local construction company here in Omaha. Mrs. Casady attended R.M. Marrs Elementary school from kindergarten through eighth grade and continued to Omaha South High, where she is a proud packer graduate, class of 1993. Mrs. Casady received her Bachelor of Arts degree in Journalism/Public Relations from Creighton University and her Master of Arts degree in Communication from the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Mrs. Casady and her husband Jason, a graduate of Central High school, have lived in South Omaha all of their lives and are raising their three daughters there, as well. They love their area and its rich diversity and culture! Their daughter, Addison (11) is a 7th grader at R.M. Marrs Magnet, Violet (8) is a 3rd grader at Gomez Heritage Elementary and Georgia (4), soon to be in OPS, too. Both Addison and Violet have been in the Dual Language program at their schools since kindergarten and plan to continue into their high school years.

Mrs. Casady wanted to be a part of the OPS Board of Education to be able to ensure that all students, just like her own children, continue to receive the high quality of education she feels she received. She hopes to support OPS in continuing the positive strides it has achieved with regard to student diversity through programs such as Dual Language, ESL and expanding early childhood education into more schools. In addition, Mrs. Casady is concerned about classroom size and expanding populations at many OPS schools throughout the district. She believes that teachers cannot be effective at their profession while facing daily overcrowding obstacles.

She looks forward to working with her fellow board members on important issues and is excited to be an ambassador for students, parents, teachers and her community.
